

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Claudia Natividade holds a doctorate from the Federal University of Minas Gerais. She has published in the areas of gender and multimodality. She is currently a teacher at FEAD-MG (Faculdade de Estudos Administrativos de Minas Gerais) in Belo Horizonte, Brazil.

Danielle Barbosa Lins de Almeida (PhD) is a Professor at the Department of Modern Foreign Languages (DLEM) and at the Post-Graduate Program in Linguistics (PROLING) at the Federal University of Paraíba (UFPB), Brazil. She has obtained her Doctoral degree at the Federal University of Santa Catarina (UFSC), and has taken part of her doctoral studies at the University of New South Wales (UNSW) in Sydney, Australia. She is currently a Postdoctoral candidate at the Universidad de Buenos Aires (UBA), where she is also a visiting scholar. Her research interests lie on Discourse Analysis, Visual Grammar, Multimodality, Systemic Functional Linguistics, Cultural and Media Studies. She coordinates the Visual Semiotics and Multimodality Research Group (GPSM).
E-mail: danielle.almeida@gmail.com

Ilha do Desterro	Florianópolis	nº 64	p. 263- 267	jan/jun 2013
------------------	---------------	-------	-------------	--------------

Dezheng Feng, PhD, is Research Assistant Professor at Department of English, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University. His research interests include the critical analysis of multimodal discourse, social semiotic theory, and media and communication studies. His recent publications include “Representing Emotion in Visual Images: A Social Semiotic Approach” in Journal of Pragmatics and “Intertextual Voices and Engagement in TV Advertisements” in Visual Communication Journal.

E-mail: will.feng@polyu.edu.hk

Elaine Espindola, PhD, Postdoctoral Fellow at the Department of English, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University. Her research interests include Text Analysis, Systemic Functional Translation Studies, and Discourse Analysis in the Workplace. Her recent publications include “Systemic Functional Linguistics and Audiovisual Translation Studies: A Suggestive Theoretical Basis for the Study of the Language of Subtitles” in DELTA and “The enactment of modality in regulatory texts: A comparative study of tenancy agreements” in The Asian ESP Journal.

E-mail: elaine.espindola@polyu.edu.hk

Fábio Alexandre Silva Bezerra has a doctoral degree in English and Applied Linguistics from Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina and a PhD degree in Linguistics from The University of Sydney (cotutelle). He holds a teaching position at Universidade Federal da Paraíba in the Department of Modern Foreign Languages. His research interests lie in the areas of systemic functional linguistics, multimodality, critical discourse analysis, social semiotics, gender studies and cultural studies. He has published papers in peer-reviewed journals such as Cadernos de Linguagem e Sociedade (UnB), Investigações (UFPE), Letras (UFSM), Linguagem & Ensino (UCPel) and Revista Latinoamericana de Estudios Del Discurso.

E-mail: fabes10@yahoo.com.br

Fernando da Silva is a doctorate student at Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina in the department of Translation Studies (PGET). He is currently developing his research on the cultural aspect of videogame localization in Brazil.

E-mail: fe900571@gmail.com

Francisco O. D. Veloso is currently Assistant Professor at the Department of English at The Hong Kong Polytechnic University. He holds a PhD in Applied Linguistics from the Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina - UFSC, Brazil. His research interests include popular culture, comic books, media and discourse analysis and multimodality/social semiotics.

Email: ndourado@gmail.com

Giana Targanski Steffen, currently a doctoral candidate at the Graduate Program in English: Linguistic and Literary Studies at Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina (UFSC), holds a Master's degree in English Language and literature from the same program. She has experience in teaching English to different levels in regular schools and private institutions. Her main research interests are the new genres of the Internet, Critical Discourse Analysis, Systemic Functional Linguistics and their implications to Language Teaching.

E-mail: giana.t.steffen@gmail.com

Len Unsworth is Professor in English and Literacies Education at Griffith University in Brisbane, Australia. His book publications include [with Angela Thomas, Alyson Simpson and Jenny Asha] Teaching children's literature with Information and Communication Technologies (McGraw-Hill/Open University Press 2005), e-literature for children and classroom literacy learning (Routledge, 2006), New Literacies and the English Curriculum (Continuum, 2008), Multimodal Semiotics (Continuum, 2008) and, with Clare Painter and Jim Martin, Reading Visual Narratives (Equinox, 2012).

E-mail: l.unsworth@griffith.edu.au

Louise Ravelli is Associate Professor of Media and Communication in the School of the Arts and Media at the University of New South Wales. Her research interest is communication in professional contexts, using social semiotic approaches, including systemic functional linguistics and multi modal discourse analysis, to enhance communication outcomes. Key areas of application include museum communication and academic literacy. Her books include Museum Texts: Communication Frameworks (2006) and Analysing Academic Writing (2004, edited with Robert A. Ellis), and most recently she has been focusing on the nature of creative-practice doctoral theses, with Professors Brian Paltridge and Sue Starfield.

Email: l.ravelli@unsw.edu.au

John Bateman is professor of Applied Linguistics at Bremen University where he has been researching issues of multimodality in several media for several years. He has published widely in the area, with recent books focusing on annotation methods for static page-based documents and the application of functional semiotics to the audiovisual moving image. Current research centers on visual narration and the empirical exploration of semiotic modes.

E-mail: : bateman@uni-bremen.de

Roseli Gonçalves do Nascimento has a Ph.D in English/Applied Linguistics from Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina in Cotutelle with the University of Sydney in Sydney, AU. She is a professor in the Department of Foreign Languages at Universidade Federal de Santa Maria. Her research interests include Genre Analysis, Multimodal Discourse Analysis and pedagogies of multiliteracy.

E-mail: profaroseli@yahoo.com.br

Sidnéa Nunes Ferreira has a Ph.D in English/Applied Linguistics from Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina (2011). Her research interests include social semiotics, multimodality and discourse analysis.

E-mail: sidnf@terra.com.br

Sônia Maria de Oliveira Pimenta is Associate Professor at the Federal University of Minas Gerais. She works at the Postgraduate Program of Linguistic Studies as a researcher, a supervisor and a teacher. She has published in the areas of gender and multimodality.

E-mail: soniapimenta1@gmail.com

Viviane M. Heberle is Associate Professor at the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, at the Federal University of Santa Catarina, Brazil and a funded researcher of CNPq (the Brazilian National Research Council). She was a Visiting scholar at Westhill College, Birmingham, UK and also at The University of Sydney, Australia. Her publications and research interest include multimodality, gender, systemic functional linguistics and critical discourse analysis.

E-mail: viviane.heberle@ufsc.br

