

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Alessandra Brandão is Professor of Film Studies and Literary Theory at the Graduate Program in Language Sciences at Universidade do Sul de Santa Catarina and was a postdoctoral fellow at the University of Leeds (2012-2013). She co-edited Políticas dos Cinemas Latino-Americanos Contemporâneos (with Ramayana Lira and Dilma Juliano) and Cinema, Globalização, Transculturalidade (with Ramayana Lira and Anelise Corseuil) and published in Brazil, Portugal, Argentina and the U.S. about Latin American and Brazilian Cinemas and the politics of film. She is a member of the Board of Directors of SOCINE - Brazilian Film and Audiovisual Studies Association.

E-mail: alessandra.b73@gmail.com

Ramayana Lira de Sousa is Professors of Film Studies and Literary Theory at the Graduate Program in Language Sciences at Universidade do Sul de Santa Catarina and was a postdoctoral fellow at University of Leeds (2012-2013). She co-edited Políticas dos Cinemas

Ilha do Desterro	Florianópolis	nº 65	p. 229- 234	jul/dez 2013
------------------	---------------	-------	-------------	--------------

Latino-Americanos Contemporâneos (with Alessandra Brandão and Dilma Juliano) and Cinema, Globalização, Transculturalidade (with Alessandra Brandão and Anelise Corseuil) and published in Brazil, Argentina and the U.S. about Latin American and Brazilian Cinemas, Gender, and the politics of film. She's a member of the Deliberative Board from SOCINE - Brazilian Film and Audiovisual Studies Association.

E-mail: ramayana.lira@gmail.com

Adalberto Müller is an Associate Professor at the Universidade Federal Fluminense (UFF), Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, where he teaches Literary Theory and Film Studies. He also taught at Université Lumière Lyon2 (France). Alongside his publications on Literature and Film, Adalberto has published Linhas Imaginárias: poesia, mídia, cinema (Ed. Sulina, 2012) and translated Francis Ponge's and e. e. cummings's works to Portuguese. He is a member of the Council of SOCINE (Brazilian Society for Film Studies), wrote and directed the short Wenceslau e a árvore do gramofone (2008), based on poems by Manoel de Barros, and published three books of poetry. In 2013 he was a Visiting Fellow at the Film Studies Program at Yale University, researching on Orson Welles's unfinished Don Quixote. His current research focuses on Film and Literature, Film and Poetry and Media Theory (esp. German language Media Theory).

E-mail: adalbertomuller@gmail.com

Cecília Mello is FAPESP Senior Research Fellow in the Department of History of Art, Universidade Federal de São Paulo, Brazil. Her research focuses on world cinema—with an emphasis on British and Chinese cinemas—and on issues of realism, cinema and urban spaces and intermediality. She has published several essays and co-edited with Lúcia Nagib the book Realism and the Audiovisual Media (Palgrave Macmillan, 2009). Her Ph.D thesis Everyday Voices: The Demotic Impulse in English Post-war Film and Television (Birkbeck, 2006) focuses on issues of realism in English film and television.

E-mail: cicamello@yahoo.co.uk

Eduardo Marks de Marques is adjunct professor of Anglophone Literatures at Universidade Federal de Pelotas (UFPel). He holds a degree in English and Portuguese (UFRGS, 1999), an MA in English (UFSC, 2002) and a Ph.D in Australian Literature and Cultural History (University of Queensland, 2007). Currently, he is a postdoctoral resident in Literary Theory at UFMG, working under the supervision of Prof. Sérgio Luiz Prado Bellei. His postdoctoral project examines the centrality of transfigured bodies in the rise of critical dystopia in novels in English in the past 30 years. Dr. Marks de Marques is the leader of the CNPq research group Teoria e Crítica Literária e Cultural: Questões Contemporâneas e Metodologias de Ensino.

E-mail: eduardo.marks@mandic.com.br

Fernando Morais da Costa is a professor at Departamento de Cinema e Video at Programa de Pós-Graduação em Comunicação from Universidade Federal Fluminense. He is the author of O som no cinema brasileiro (Rio de Janeiro: 7 Letras, 2008) and organized Som + Imagem (Rio de Janeiro: 7 Letras, 2012).

Email: fmorais29@terra.com.br

Genilda Azerêdo is professor at Universidade Federal da Paraíba, teaching at Graduação em Letras and at Programa de Pós-Graduação em Letras. In the undergraduate program, she works with literary theory and English literature. In the graduate program, since 2002, she has been advising in the area of literature and cinema. Currently, she is developing a research with CNPQ's financial support, through the scholarship of productivity in research/PQ 2. She has published regularly in journals, events and newspapers. She is a member of the following academic associations: ABRAPUI – Associação Brasileira de Professores Universitários em Inglês e Literaturas de Língua Inglesa; ABRALIC–Associação Brasileira de Literatura Comparada; and SOCINE–Sociedade Brasileira de Estudos de Cinema e Audiovisual.

Email: genilda@cchla.ufpb.br.

Ignatius Chukwumah, Ph.D is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of English and Literary Studies, Federal University, Wukari, Taraba State, Nigeria, with research interests centring on Northrop Frye's and Paul Ricoeur's theories; African and African American literatures; Indigenous interpretive symbolic codes; and postcolonial deconstructive studies. He has published in African Literature Today (2010, USA); The Romanian Journal of English Studies (2013, Romania); Tydskrif vir Letterkunde (2013, South Africa); CLCWeb: Comparative Literature and Culture (2013, USA); and in a host of other reputable learned journals.

E-mail: ignachuks@gmail.com

Lucia Fatima Fernandes Nobre is a Professor in the Departamento de Letras Estrangeiras Modernas (DLEM) at Universidade Federal da Paraíba (UFPB), Brazil. She has a doctoral degree in Literature and Culture from Universidade Federal da Paraíba. Her publication and research interest include narratology, literature and cinema, film adaptation and metafictional narratives.

E-mail: lucia_nobre@hotmail.com

Marcela Soalheiro is a bachelor in Social Communication–Cinema, by Universidade Federal Fluminense, in 2011. Currently, she is a CAPES scholarship student from the Masters in Programa de Pós-Graduação em Comunicação Social at Universidade Federal Fluminense in the area of Cinema, where she develops the research “Jane Austen é pop: o papel do espectador e do leitor na Austen Mania”.

Email: marcela_soalheiro@id.uff.br

Marcia Tiemy Morita Kawamoto holds a degree in Letras Português e Inglês (UEM, 2009), an MA in English and Corresponding Literature (UFSC, 2012) and is currently a doctoral candidate at Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina. Her dissertation focuses on temporality in modern and postmodern science fiction films. In recent years, Marcia has researched on Postmodernism, film studies and temporality.

E-mail: marcia.tiemy@gmail.com

Marcus Rogério Salgado, Ph.D. Born in São Paulo (1972), he earned his Ph.D. in Comparative Literature at Universidade Federal do Rio de Janeiro. His research interest is focused on the spatial aspects of literary representation. He is currently a teacher at Universidade de Santiago de Compostela, in Galicia, Spain.

E-mail: marcussalgado@gmail.com

Maria Lúcia Milléo Martins is Associate Professor of literatures in English at Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina. She has published Antologia de Poesia Norte-Americana Contemporânea (as translator), Duas Artes: Carlos Drummond de Andrade e Elizabeth Bishop, and several essays mainly in the area of poetry. Currently she is working on a study on contemporary Canadian poetry and multiculturalism, resultant from a post-doctoral program at the University of Toronto. As co-editor, she is also preparing a collection of Charles Simic's writings (poetry, essays, and memoirs). Both studies will be published in Brazil. E-mail: maluminosa@gmail.com