

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Maria Helena de Moura Neves is Professor of Portuguese at the Sao Paulo State University. She also teaches at the Graduation Programs of Mackenzie University and UNESP. Her main works include A vertente grega da gramática tradicional (1987), Gramática na escola (1990), A gramática funcional (1997), Gramática de usos do português (2000), Gramática: História. Teoria e análise. Ensino (2002), Guia de uso do português. Confrontando regras e usos (2003) and Que gramática estudar na escola? Norma e uso na Língua Portuguesa (2003). She is co-author of Dicionário gramatical de verbos do português contemporâneo do Brasil (1990) and Dicionário de usos do português do Brasil (2002).

Margarida Basílio is Professor of Linguistics and Portuguese at the Pontifícia Universidade Católica do Rio de Janeiro. Author of the books Estruturas lexicais do português and Teoria lexical, she is the leading authority on word-formation in Brazil. Her current research interests are polysemy and word-formation, the role of metonymy in word-formation and the identification of morphological and lexical units.

D Alan Cruse was formerly Senior Lecturer in Linguistics at the University of Manchester, UK. He is now retired. He is the author of Lexical Semantics (Cambridge University Press, 1986), Meaning in Language (Oxford University Press, 2nd Edition, 2004) and is joint author with William Croft of Cognitive Linguistics (Cambridge University Press, 2004). His main research interests are in lexical semantics, pragmatics and cognitive linguistics.

Ilha do Desterro	Florianópolis	nº 47	p.259-260	jul./dez. 2004
------------------	---------------	-------	-----------	----------------

Veneeta Dayal did her Ph.D. at Cornell University in 1991. She has taught at Rutgers University since 1990, where she is currently Professor of Linguistics. Her areas of interest are semantic theory, the syntax-semantics interface and cross-linguistic variation in semantics with special emphasis on the semantics of Hindi. She has worked on a number of topics, including wh in-situ questions, partial wh movement/scope marking, free choice items and genericity.

Sergio Menuzzi lectures General Linguistics for undergraduates and Syntax for graduates at the Faculty of Letters of the Pontifical Catholic University of Rio Grande do Sul (PUCRS, Porto Alegre, Brazil). His current research interests have to do with patterns of interaction between syntactic, semantic and pragmatic constraints, as shown specially in anaphora and in information structure related phenomena.

Henriëtte de Swart is a professor of French linguistics and semantics at Utrecht University, the Netherlands. Her interests are in semantics and its interfaces with syntax and pragmatics. Topics she has worked on include tense and aspect, indefinites, quantification and negation.

Joost Zwarts is a post-doctoral researcher at Utrecht University, The Netherlands. His interests are in lexical semantics and in the syntax and semantics of function words, especially prepositions and articles.

Rodolfo Ilari is the author of several books on semantics: Semântica, (1985, in collaboration with João Wanderley Geraldi); Introdução à Semântica, brincando com a gramática (2001) and Brincando com as palavras, uma introdução ao estudo do léxico (2002). His main interests are the constitutive mechanisms of meaning construction, including tense and aspect. He was one of the founders of IEL, Unicamp, where he worked for over 30 years.

Renato Miguel Basso is a senior-year student in Linguistics at Unicamp, Brazil. Currently he is carrying on research supported by FAPESP within the project “Aspecto e Acionalidade no Português Brasileiro”. His major research interests are the relations between temporal reference, aspect and actionality.